

Mrs. MacMillan, CIA Secretary

Mrs. Ronald A. MacMillan, 52, who worked for the Federal Bureau of Investigation and later, the Central Intelligence Agency, died yesterday at Georgetown University Hospital following a long illness.

Mrs. MacMillan, the former Jane Southard, came to the Washington area from her native South Dakota in 1940 and took a job as a secretary with the FBI. During World War II, she served in the bureau's field offices in San Francisco and Honolulu.

In 1947 she joined the CIA and continued there as a secretary until she became ill earlier this year.

Mrs. McMillan leaves her husband, of the home, 4200 Cathedral Ave. NW; her mother, Mrs. Mary Frances Southard of 3326 Coryell Lane, Alexandria, and a brother, John G. Southard of 850 S. Greenbrier St., Arlington.

Mass was to be said today at the Annunciation Church, 3200 39th St. NW, with burial in Calvary Memorial Park, Fairfax, Va.
